ATLANTA KNOWS HIM.

THE BOGUS VANDERBILT AT LARGE

AN EXPLANATION OF A SOCIAL RUMOR TWO MEMBERS IN A QUARREL.

The Real George Vanderbilt Denies His Rumored Engagement with the South Carolina Lady.

WASHINGTON, January 10 .- The New York World prints a story today in which George Vanderbilt denies that he is to marry Miss Johnston, of South Carolina, as has been reported. He says he does not even know the

How the rumor of such an engagement could get out is the mystery. The Johnstone family is an old and proud one, and none of its members would be parties to such a rumor. The explanation ventured is that "George H. Vanderbilt," who played his role in Atlanta a year ago, is the hero, and that for some purpose of his own he has spread the rumor. This imposter made the acquaintances of several Georgia families at White Sulphur Springs. called down that way to them later on. He took rooms in the Kimball, and soon began to cut a

AN ENGLISH SYNDICATE AT WORK. Colonel Jack Brown's story is correct. There is an English syndicate with a Mr. Forney representing it here, which has its eye on Georgia for investments. They have offered, or will offer one million dollars for the S. S. S. company plant and patents. Their idea is to have the present owners take one-third interest in the new organization, and continue to manage. If the S. S. S. company pays better than they understand the syndicate will per-haps raise their figures. The same syndicate has its eye on other things in Georgia. They want to buy every cotton compress in Georgia. and the entire south, and right now have an agent at New Orleans, and one somewhere in Georgia, quietly attempting to secure options on all the compresses. It is a syndicate similar to the one which recently purchased nearly all the breweries in this country. Their object, as I understand, is not to form a trust of any sort and raise the price of compressing, but simply to put large amounts of money in well paying estments, and they have concluded that cotton compresses and the S. S. S. company are about as good as can be found. The above ls correct, and unless the owners of the cotton ompresses run their prices up out of reason, it seems pretty well settled that English capital will control them within six months.

Johnson came on to ment of public works, and William Randolph, hurry up Locke's nomination in going to an insurance broker of No. 32 Nassau street. pointment as collector at Savannah. Mr Grimes carried him to see the president this morning. Johnson thanked Mr. Harrison for his appointment as collector at Atlanta, urged him to send Locke's nomination to the senate without delay, and spoke a good word for Tom Johnson. The president listened but made no promises in Tom Johnson's favor. Alton Angier is here, incidentally, to help Tom Johnson, but principally to help himself. Alton wants a consulship and wants it badly, in fact so bad that his chances of getting it are first-He saw Uncie Ben at white house this morning and had QUITE A CHAT with him. As he came out there was a smile of contentment upon his face, which meant that he was thoroughly satisfied with the interview. Although Alton was a Longstreet man in the fight last year, Colonel Buck and all the little Buckites deem it best to forget the past, and will assist him in the race for the consulship. Mr. Angier, of course, has picked out the consulship which he would prefer, but is not so particular that he would refuse any good one. A good consulship pays from three to ten thousand dollars.

GEORGIA POSTMASTERS APPOINTED. masters were appointed today: W. O. Van-diviere, Bellmont, Hall county; J. I. Bennett, Brentwood, Wayne county; J. L. Wilson, Crane Eater, Gordon county; W. H. MR. CLEMENTS IN HIS ROOM. Mr. Clements is still confined to his room and is yet quite unwell. His physician, however, pronounced him slightly better today. Mayor Barnes is very much improved, and was at the house today.

Mr. Candler, however, is confined to his room with a very severe cold. Although, at the democratic caucus tonight, the members from each state did not select their representatives in the campaign committee, it is probable that Georgia will select Lester. Mr. Grimes was the member in the last congress, but as it is the usual custom for the states to select new members, and as Colonel Lester is the only new member of the delegation he will perhaps be the man.

One Strikes the Other, When the Assaulted

Man Draws His Revolver, and Fires Three Shots at the Running Figure.

NEW YORK, January 11-1:30 a. m .- [Special.]—The members of the Southern society, that aristocratic organization composed entirely of men of southern birth, have been in a fever heat of excitement during the night over the attempt of one of the members to kill another. Shortly after 6 p. m., passersby in West Twenty-fifth street, between Broadway and Sixth avenue, noticed two gentlemen stand on stoop of the Southern society's club house, No. 18.

They gesticulated wildly, and talked in angry tones. One of the men was finally heard to say, in a lould voice and in a threatening

"Will you take that back, sic?" The other promptly replied in an equally

"No, sir, I will not!" The first speaker raised his arm, and struck the other a stinging blow square in the face, which almost sent him reeling down the stone steps to the sidewalk. He grasped the stoop rail, which saved him from falling. The other, as soon as he struck the blow, stepped quickly by the other to the edge of the stoop, and began to descend the steps to the street.

THE HIP POCKET APPEALED TO. As soon as the man who had been struck recovered his balance, he reached back to his hip pocket. When he withdrew his hand it held a revolver. At sight of the pistol the small crowd which had gathered near the stoop in front of the club house, scattered. The man at the top levelled his revolver and fired point blank at his assailant, who uttered a cry, and started off at a double quick pace in the direction of Broadway. The man with the revolver ran half way down the stoop again, lev-elled his pistol and fired another shot at the retreating figure of his foe.

THE THIRD SHOT FIRED. After stepping upon the sidewalk and firing one more shot at his foe, who was then seventyfive feet away, and rapidly increasing the dis tance, the would-be murderer turned about and dashed up the stoop into the club house, holding his smoking revolver in his hand. The man who had been made a target of, had, in the meantime, run into the Twenty-fifth street entrance of the Hoffman liouse. He almost frightened the clerk, Thomas Smith out of a year's growth by his pallid face and

"Give me a pistol," he gasped as he rushed into the place. "A cowardly scoundrel has shot me in the back in the street. For God's sake give me a pistol, and I will teach him not to shoot an unarmed man."

HE HAD NOT BEEN SCRATCHED. It was soon found that he had not been scratched, and when he ascertained this he became calm. After excusing himself for his conduct he went away.

The club members would have but little to say about the matter, either to the police or reporters. The matter was reported to the West Thirtieth street station by Officer Hussey, and Detective Brett made an investiga tion, but could learn little or nothing about

THE CLUB MEMBERS SILENT. The club members acknowledged that there had been a "little trouble" between two of the members, and that when they got outside the clubbouse, one of them foolishly drew a revolver and fired some shots. It was also heard by the police that the names of the contestants were William Hancock Clark, of the depart-The quarrel between the men be club parlor, but all members pleaded ignorance as to the cause. No arrests were made.

THE HOUSE IN MOURNING.

Announcement of the Death of Judge Kelley of Pennsylvania. WASHINGTON, January 10.-Draped in sombe black, and adorned with a simple bouquet of white flowers, the desk so long occupied by Mr. Kelley, of Pennsylvania, this morning reminded the members that "the father of the house" had departed from their midst.

In his opening prayer, the chaplain said:

"Thy servant, so long ill and suffering, is at rest. The event that has been approaching has come. The loss, as feared, has been realized. He, so long an honored and useful member of this body, going in and out among his associates here, has gone away forever. The places, scenes and duties that here knew him so long and well, will know him no more forever. And what can we say but the Lord giveth, and we thank Thee for the memory of him the Lord has taken away. We would devoutly recognize Thy hand, and be enabled even to add: 'Blessed be the name of the Lord.'" would devoutly recognize Thy hand, and be enabled even to add: 'Blessed be the name of the Lord.'"

Immediately after the reading of the journal, Mr. O'Neill, of Pennsylvania, rose, and in a voice which was at times shaken with emotion, said:

Mr. Speaker: Irrise to announce the death of my dear colleague, the Hon. William D. Kelley, which occurred at twenty minutes pas 6 o'clock last evening at the Riggs house, in the city of Washington. I need not say, Mr. Speaker, that it is the saddest duty that has ever devolved upon me since my connection with the house. The death of Judge Kelly, who has been elected fifteen times as a member from one of the Philadelphia districts (the first election occurring in October, 1869) and last, the fifteenth, occurring November, 1888, takes from me the longest acquaintance of my public life, an intimate friendly acquaintance, never marred for one moment of time. I cannot today express my feelings and my thoughts on the decease of this distinguished man, known not only throughout this country, and in my opinion, perhaps better known throughout the world than almost any man in public life today; for his great services to his country, for his strong mind, for his working capacity and all that appertains to a faithful representative for nearly thirty years in the house of representatives of the United States. I will take occasion, Mr. Speaker, to ask the house, in the near future, to designate a day when the members may express their feelings in commemoration of the deceased member. I offer the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the house has heard, with deep members may express their feelings in commemoration of the deceased member. I offer the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the house has heard, with deep regret and profound sorrow, of the death of Hon. William D. Kelly, late representative from the state of Pennsylvania.

Resolved, That in recognition of the long and distinguished term of service rendered in this body by the Hon. William D. Kelly—a term longest in its history, and which has made him for many years "the father of the house"—that appropriate services be held in the hall of the house tomorrow at 12 o'clock noon.

Resolved, That a committee of nine members be appointed, who, with such members of the senate as may be appointed, shall attend the funeral at Philadelphia.

Resolved, That the clerk communicate these resolutions to the senate and transmit a copy to the family of the deceased.

The resolntions were unanimously adopted and the speaker appointed the following committee: Messrs. O'Neill, of Pennsylvania; McKinley, Cannon, Banks, McKenna, Carlisle, Mills, Holman and Mutchler.

and Mutchler.
The house then, as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, at 12:25 adjourned.
Vice-President Morton has appointed Senators Sherman, Cameron, Manderson, Butler and Colquitt to represent the senate at the funeral of the late representative Kelley.

bigamy case wherein it was stated that haping Runyan, the brother of Hoffee's wife here, had been all along cognizant of the fact of Hoffee's marriage with Miss May Cheney, and that he had called upon Miss Cheney after the marriage in company with Hoffee and extended congratulations, raised quite a ripple of excitement here, as young Runyan had been supposed to have been pursuing his theological studies at Chattanooga, and was about ready to graduate as a full-fledged preacher. Many were ready to say that it was a put-up scheme between Runyan and Hoffee to have Hoffee marry Miss Cheney, and, after securing her money, to desert her, and both come north together. This Runyan's relatives and Mrs. Hoffee indigmantly deny, and it is but fair to say that this supposition is not borne out by the facts. There appears to be no lack of desire upon the part of Hoffee's wife here to aid in Hoffee's prosecution. She is limited as to means, but her father and brothers are reputable and good citizens. Hoffee's parents, who are well-to-do farmers in this county, had a visit from the wronged wife since the bigamist's exploits were given publicity and she asserts that they told her that if she aided the prosecution of her husband in any way they would dishinerit and refuse to recognize her two children.

NASHVILLE GAMBLERS ALARMED. They Find Themselves Before a Stern

Judge.
NASHVILLE, Tenn., January 10.—[Special.]-NASHVILLE, Tonn., January 10.—[Special.]—Another hognis, containing news dynamics the heretofore, was cast among the gambling fraternity by Judge Ridley. The charge given to the grand jury, Monday morning, fell with heaviest force upon the proprietors of gambling houses, and contained modifications, or, more correctly speaking, cautions, which raised hopes among the regular patrons of such places that they had at least a loophole left them for escape. These hopes are blasted by the following order, which Judge Ridley had entered upon the minutes:

"Every person hereafter convicted of gaming by this court, when the gambling shall have been done in a gambling house, and after this date, will be fined within the limits prescribed by law, and will also be sentenced to jail for a period not less than thirty days. In all cases where the grand jury return presentments of indictments for gaming the clerk will issue instanter capiases, and the cases will be set for trial immediately."

MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL.

Attorneys for the Defense in the Cronin Case File One.

CHICAGO, January 10 .- Late this afternoon, Attorneys Swing, Donahoe and Forest filed a motion for a new trial in the cases of Coughlin, Burke O'Sullivan and Kunze, convicted of the murder of Dr. Cronin. The motion was filed today, in accordance with the order of Judge McConnell, be cordance with the order of Judge McConnell, be-fore whom argument will be made Monday. The motion assigns thirty-nine causes of error in the rulings of Judge McConnell during the trial of the case. These grounds of alleged error embraces every point contested by the attorneys for the de-fense, and range from an objection to the court's overruling a motion to quash the indictments up to the assertion that the defense has, since the trial, discovered new evidence, which entitles them to a new trial.

Carden Will Have to Hang. Today the jury returned a verdict of guilty. The penalty in this state is death by hanging, in the discretion of the court, and the sentiment of the people of Bradley county, when the offense was committed, which has been strongly for mob violence in this case, is loudly demanding the enforcement of the death penalty. The sentencing judge has withheld his decision until tomorrow. It is confidently believed that Carden will have to hang.

SANTA FE, January 10.—An unknown desperado has for some time been terrorizing the mining camp of Georgetown by shooting at inoffensive citizens. A few days ago an attempt was made to arrest him, but he "got the drop" on the officers and made his escape into the monntains. Emboldened by his success, he returned yesterday and began shooting at several citizens, when a posse was organized and succeeded ineffecting his arrest. While taking the prisoner to jail a mob of masked men met them, who took the prisoner away, and going into a neighboring grove hanged him to a tree and riddled his body with bullets. Nothing is known of the man.

THREE SHOTS FIRED. | MAY COME TO GEORGIA | A STRUGGLE FOR LIFE. THE HORRIBLE ACCIDENT IN THE

RIVER AT LOUISVILE

BY WHICH EIGHTEEN LIVES ARE LOST

risoned in the Caisson and the River Rushing on Him—Bodies Recovered.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., January 10.—At 12:20 o'clock this morning the bodies of three of the unfortunate victims of the caisson accident were recovered by the workmen. The positions in which they were found showed that a desperate struggle hadtaken place at the narrow door of the escape. One negro had succeeded in pulling his body through the aperture, but death had overtaken him just when life was promised. Another negro had crawled partly through, and his hands were fastened by death in the clothing of a negro in front of him, showing that he had made a desperate endeavor to escape first. Between the two negroes was the body of a white man. It appeared from his position that he was trying to push back some one who was clinging to his legs. The sand accumulated at the door by the sudden sinking of the caisson had wedged in the body of the white man in such a manner that it could not be removed.

a manner that it could not be removed.

At 11:30 a.m., the work was discontinued in order to allow the workmen to rest and refresh themselves. Later a fresh force was put on duty and the work renewed.

Abe Taylor, one of the negro laborers who survived the terrible catastrophe, was found at his home on Preston street by a reporter. He had not entirely recovered from the fright occasioned by his late experience, and his voice trembled as he told what happened.

"As near as I can remember," he said,
"there were eighteen of us who went down.
Some of us had candles in our hands and others carried the tools we worked with. The engine was pumping air into the caisson. We were not thinking of danger, and didn't have any idea there was a weak point in the caisson.
We were talking and running on with each other just as we always do. Somebody said we would be relieved in about two hours and I replied that I wished it was now. I looked to see how near the caisson was to the sand bottom, and was standing close to the little door when I heard somebody say: 'Great God, men! she is breaking!' Just then the water commenced to rush through the shell doors, and it seemed as if everthing gave away at once. I broke for the door. I hardly know how I did, but I managed to get through.
The men behind me were rushing and tumbling over each other and I could hear them crying:

my God save us. Badly frightened as I was,
I couldn't help but pity them. I could do nothing for them, so I helped myself. I could hear the water rushing in on the poor fellows as I climbed up through the man-hole, but their cries sounded louder than the roar of the their cries sounded founder than the roar of the water. I got out safely and thanked God for my deliverance. I never will forget that awful sight as long as I live."

"No, sir, they couldn't live. The water is unning in faster than all the engines can once it out. There isn't any way for them to force it out. There isn't any way for them to escape."

Further investigation shows two more men to have be their lives—Hamilton Morris and for the Cost making the total sixteen.

Efforts to recover the bodies in the bridge caisson by pumping in air have been given up, and in the morning men will be sent in by the excavation shaft. It is hoped then the thirteen remainining bodies will be taken out and an inquest will be held at once. The body of Hamilton Morris was recovered in the pipe at the top of sand before the machinery broke today.

She Died in Her Orgies.

COLUMBIA, S. C., January 10.—Marie Seabrook a colored fortune-teller, was fatally burned las night in a poor hovel she occupied with a man passing as her husband, in the outskirts of this city. Both were addicted to drinking, and when under the influence of whisky the woman was accustomed, her neighbors say, to dance about a lighted lamp placed on the floor. In this way last night her clothing caught fire, and when, attracted by the flames, the neighbors rushed in she was found without a vestige of clothing remain and horribly burned, with a lamp at her feet.

Horses Suffocated. NEWARK, N. J., January 10.—Eighteen horses were shipped in a car via the Central railroad from Pennsylvania to this city yesterday, and when the car was opened this morning fifteen of the horses were found suffocated, only three of them being altive. They had been shipped in an ordinary freight car, and the lack of ventilation killed them.

Three More Bodies Found.

A Strike Settled.

Woburn, Mass., January 10.—At a meeting of the striking workingmen tonight Grand Master Workman Moreland announced that the strike and lockout in the leather industry is practically ended and the men were ordered back to work next Monday morning. Both sides have agreed to submit the matter to the state board of arbitration, who will open a hearing, in the case next Thursday. Before the state board will take hold of the matter the mannfacturers must open their factories and the men must go back to work. A few men who work in the cellars will return to work tomorrow. The men will be paid from Monday morning whatever wages the board shall establish for the future, such price list to be final. It is understood that the state board will not determine the length of a day's labor. It is estimated that the strike will cost upwards of $100,000.

A Rough Time at Sea.

New York, Jannary 10.—The steamship Stag which left Bremen December 7th, arrived here this morning. Her passage was so rough that it took thirty-one days to make the voyage, which usu-ally takes but sixteen days. When in latitue fifty-four degrees sixty-one minutes and longitude twenty-three degrees and forty-four minutes the lookout sighted a sinking vessel flying a flag of distress. Two boats put off to the wreck, despite the heavy sea, and returned with the captain and crew of eighteen men of the ship Shakespeare. They had suffered much from exposure. The captain afterwards died on the Stag, and was buried at sea. The crew are now being cared for by the German consul-here.

TENNESSEE HEROES.

HAVE THEIR FACES PERPETUATED ON CANVAS.

AN INTERESTING HISTORICAL SCENE

Who Accepts Them on the Part of the State—His Speech of Acceptance.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., January 10.—[Special.]—Governor Taylor's office was the scene of a very interesting incident this morning. Splendid portraits of two of Tennessee's most distinguished sons were presented to the executive of the state, in trust, to nang upon the walls of the gubernatorial office. The pictures represent Governor Aaron V. Brown and General Gideon J. Pillow, and were painted about twenty-six years ago by Mr. William Cooper, and have since been the property of the widow of Governor Brown and the sister of General Pillow. The portraits are executed in oil and mounte in heavy gilt frames, each about five by seven feet.

Governor Brown is represented as seated at a table, a book in his right hand. General Pillow is represented as dressed in the uniform of a major-general, his helmet on a table at which he is seated, and his left hand clasping his sword.

Governor Brown's picture hangs over the mantel-piece in the governor's private office.

General Pillow's on the west wall of the outer office.

Colonel Colyar, addressing the governor, made a short and appropriate address.

Governor Taylor received the portraits in the name of the state. His remarks in part were as follows:

"I think it is peculiarly appropriate that these old veterans of the Mexican war are here today to witness the presentation, through Colonel Colyer, of the portraits of one of their bravest leaders to the state. It is a peculiar fact that the American troops never lost a battle from the moment they crossed the border, but like a hurricane they swept across the country to the city of Montezumas. Let us honor the men who gave us the liberties we now enjoy, and let us hang their portraits in public places that young men may look on their faces and emulate their noble characters.

VERY CLOSE FOR BRICE. Three Caucus Bolters Can Make a Tie in the Vote.

COLUMBUS, O., January 10.—There have been several rumors in circulation today relative to the proposed bolt of the cacus, which last night nominated Colonel Calvin S. Brice for the senate. nominated Colonel Calvin S. Brice for the senate. There were seventy-three members at the caucus, three did not appear. They are Smith, of Franklin; Munson, of Licking, and Counts. of Shelby. It is reported they will not vote for Brice. Counts is here and refuses to talk. Munsen went home this morning. One report is that he will vote for Brice and another that he will bott. A double-headed expression has also been received from Smith for and against Brice. The situation, at least, has created uneasiness. Those who ought to know the facts are not talking for publication. There will be seventy-four democrats from the caucus to vote for Brice—Brown, of Hancock, having sent a note to the caucus that he would support the nominee. There are seventy-one republicans, and if the three alleged botters join them they would have the same number of votes as the democrats. The claim is that Brice will have to secure a majority of all members elected to the legislature, which would be seventy-six. The Brice managers claim that the law only requires a majority of those present and voting. Representative Knapp, democrat, died last night, and Lawlor, democrat, is not expected to live through the night, which cuts the number of democratic members to seventy-seven, and the three alleged bolters still reduces the available strength to seventy-four. Brice and his advisors seem but very little disturbed over the report, and say the three members will support the caucus in the interest of any other democrat or republican. An election to fill the Knapp vacancy will be ordered by Governor Campbell next week, but this will require thirty days. Governor Foraker refuses to issue proclamation today on the ground that Knapp had not been buried. There were seventy-three members at the caucus, Trotter Has Enough to Retire Upon. WASHINGTON, January 10.—The resignation of Trotter, colored recorder of deeds for the district has been received at the white house upon a request made by the president. Terms of the Bill to Be Presented Congress.

WASHINGTON, January 10.—A bill has been prepared by General Grosvnor, establishing the Chattanooga and Chicamauga national military park, which has the support of leading members societies of the Army of the Cumberland, Army of Tennessee and Army of the Potomac, and all eading ex-confederate officers engaged in the battles indicated. It provides that upon jurisdic tion being ceded to the United States by the states of Remessee and Georgia, that the public roads along the crest of Missionary ridge from the north end of Sherman's heights to the Rossville road from Rossville to McFarland's gap, and the road from Rossville by the way of Lee & Gordon's mills, to Crawfish Springs way of Lee & Gordon's minis, to transact spinings shall become approaches to and parts of said national park proper, to which title is to be obtained by the United States by the condemnation and tional park proper, to which title is to be obtained by the United States by the condemnation and purchase, after the ceding of jurisdiction by the state of Georgia. It embraces the battlefield of Chicamauga and is to be bounded by a line starting on the LaFayette road, just north of the Cloud house; thence west to McFarland's gap; thence along Dry Valley-road to road from Crawfish Springs to Lee & Gordon's mills; thence to these mills; thence down Chickamauga river to Reed's bridge and thence to the place of beginning, covering about 7,000 acres.

The affairs of the park are to be managed unde the secretary of war by three commissioners, one to be an army officer. It is made the duty of these commissioners, under the secretary of war, to ascertain and substantially mark all battle lines.

The Chicamauga Memorial association, an incorporationjunder the laws of Georgia, and authorities of any of the states which had troops in the battles of Chicamauga or Chattanooga, are given the right to ascertain and mark the lines of their troops, subject to the approval of the secretary of war, who shall have the right to decide disputed points. The present owners of the property on the field within the proposed limits of the park are to be allowed to remain, if they so desire, on their lands after the purchase by the government, upon terms which amount to a little more than an agreement on their part to preserve the buildings which were standing at the time of the battle, and present the outlines of fields and forests, and to help care for and preserve marks which may be placed on the field. An appropriation of $250,000 is provided for carrying the act into effect. The bill has been under consideration by a large number of soldiers of both armies for over a year.

The Mississippi Legislature.

JACKSON, Miss., January 10.—[Special.]—The Mississippi legislature is getting down to work and today many bills were introduced; none of them of great interest. Trusts and combines are being strongly aimed at. The election of public printer is exciting great interest. Messrs. Banks and McKeely,opponents of the present incumbent, are on the ground and making a vigorous fight. The two houses are now in a muddle as to when the election will take place.

Mrs. Mright, Miss Amerson, Miss Tucker and Miss Dorsey. All are on the ground. Candidates for railroad commissoners are as thick as hops.

WASHINOTON, January 10.—The discussion of the world's fair bill by the house committee on foreign affairs has resulted in bringing forward a proposition which it is suggested may aid in the selection of a site for the fair by the house. The committee has already decided that it will report a bill leaving blank the name of the city where the fair shall be held, but it is feared that if it goes into the house in that shape and without some arrangement in advance to govern the method of selection of a site, no agreement can ever be reached.

Thousands of Germans Take a Last Look at the Empress's Face.

Berlin, January 10.—The body of Empress Augusta is lying in state in the chapel Schosburg. The chapel has been opened to the public and a large number of persons are moving past the coffin, taking a last look at the remains. The will of the dead empress has been made public. She bequeathes her palace at Berlin and Babiesburg to Emperor William. To her daughter, the grand duchess of Baden, she gives the sum of 4,000,000 marks. She leaves legacies to her servants; to a large number of charitable and religious bodies.

The Empress Fredrick, accompanied by her daughters, arrived in Berlin this morning from Rome, to attend the funeral of Empress Augusta. The crown prince of Denmark, who will represent the king of Denmark at the funeral, has also arrived here.

Thieves. SPEINGFIELD, Mass., January 10.—E. W. Nichols, veternary surgeon, who died here today from influenza complications, had a remarkable war history. He was a member of the Fourteenth Michigan cavairy, and was captured and confined in Ander-sonville. He was chosen sheriff of the court organized by the starving union prisoners to organized by the starving union prisoners to punish a gang of comrades that stole their small supply of rations. Ten were convicted in the court of union prisoners and sentenced to be hanged. Nichols, who was a powerful man, had to string the men up alone, and one of the emaciated comrades was hanged a second time, as the rope broke. On his return north Nichols re-enlisted, and was with the gang of cavalrymen who captured Jefferson Davis, and shared the $100,000 offered by President Johnson, who issued a proclamation charging Davis with complicity in the assassination of Lincoln. Nichols had property, and was successful in business. On account of his horrible duty at Andersonville he was shunned by the veterans and rarely alluded to the affair.

NEW YORK, January 10.—The annual meeting of the New York city union prisoners of war was held tonight. This morning about I o'clock Leonard Terry, a car coupler on the Richmond and Danville road, attempted to make a coupling at Belt junction.

His foot slipped and he fell, the wheels of the car passing over his right leg, at the ankie, crushing it in a borrible manner.

The wounded man was taken to the office of the Drs. Westmoreland for treatment. His groans attracted the attention of people who had gone to sleep along Decatur street, and they came out to the doors and windows of their homes to see what was the matter. So far as can be learned it was simply an accelent, and nobody was to blame. The leg will probably be amputated.

Hewis A. Mitchell of Dodge. The firm of Harris & Mitchell are large turpentine and lumber men.

The bill of Mr. Dodge alleges that he owns about 230,000 acres of land lying in what was originally Macon or Wilkinson county, but now Montgomery, Telfair, Dodge and Laurens counties. On some of this land the towns of Eastman, Channeey and Normandale have been built. He claims he has a perfect chain of titles, beginning with grants from the state of Georgia. He alleges that Harris & Mitchell have trespassed upon lots 206 and 207 in the thirteenth district of Dodge county, and cut therefrom $800 worth of timber; that they are now engaged in cutting timber off of lots 174 and 175, and are threatening to cut timber off of lots 142 and 143, all in the thirteenth district of Dodge county. He petitioned that an injunction be granted, and that Harris & Mitchell be restrained from further trespass. Judge Miller on vesterday at Perry signed an order requiring defendants to show cause before him at Macon on January 25th, why the injunction should not be granted, and restrained them from all tresspass until the cause can be heard at the time stated. R. K. Hines, Hill and Harris, of Macon, and DeLacy and Bishop, of Eastman, represent plaintiff.

SAVANNAH, Ga., January 10 .- [Special.]-The grand army men in Savannah are taking considerable interest in the trouble new in Louisiana, with regard to the chartering negro posts. Some of them side with the department commander in his action, but there are others who feel that it would have been better to have quietly ignored the offers of the negroes to organize. GEORGIA NEGROES AT WORK.

At one time there threatened to be a little trouble in Georgia from the same cause, though at the time it escaped publicity. This was a couple of months ago, when a number of colored men here, who had fought on the union side, decided to organize. They selected Colonel Robert G. Shaw, who died leading the colored troops at the assault on Fort Wagner, as the hero whose name it was fitting that they should perpetuate. The necessary application was made, but, through a misapprehension on their part, it was sent to W. S. Hancock post, with the request that Commander Gleasor issue a charter.

GENERAL LEWIS WILLING. He has no such authority, and the papers were sent to Department Commander John R. Lewis, the postmaster at Atlanta, who granted their request on an order from the commander in-chief. When the white Grand Army Republic became aware of the fact that a negro post was contemplated, some of them kicked.

TROUBLE WAS FEARED. For a time it looked as if there might be some trouble over it. It was shown, however, that under the rules of the organization, the negro ex-soldier has just as much right in this respect as the white wearer of the blue, and so the objectors succumbed, if not gracefully, at east wisely.

Anne Pixiey was the attraction. Ten years ago, when Miss Pixley made her first visit to Atlanta, the most striking feature of the audience was its absence; look at it now. For years she has met with this same success, and she has deserved every hit of it. Like wine she improves each year, and yet each year there seems no room for improvement. Bright, sparkling, vivacious, a capital actress and a lovely woman, she has won to herself friends and admirers everywhere; and they are friends of the right sort, friends who love her for herself and cannot be made to be lieve that she has her equal. In writing a notice of Annie Pixley and her play there is little to be said. "22, Second Filor." has been seen in Atlanta before. It is a comedy full of genuine fun and funny situations, and it gives Miss Pixley an opportunity of showing what a clever woman she is—an opportunity of which she fully and completely avails herself. In the dual role of Mrs. Ellis and Miss. Featherstone, the charming actress is at her, best. She has a number of new songs, all of them good, and in all her specialties she is, as always, excellent.

and in all her specialties she is, as always, excellent.

There are several new faces in the company, yet the favorites are all there. Mr. M. C. Daly as the festive Smith, is simply inimitable. Mr. Barke is an excellent actor, and Mr. Brennan, Mr. Sackett, Mr. Friend and Mr. Kingstone are equally strong in their several parts. Miss Reynolds, who takes the part of Mrs. Wynkoop, is a beautiful woman and a superlatively good actress. Miss Ravel and Miss Douglass, too, deserve to be mentioned. The company is, in short, strong in every particular; the star is better than ever; the performance is the most delightful possible.

At the matinee today, "22. Second Floor" will be repeated. Tonight Miss Pixley will be seen in her famous play, "The Deacon's Daughter."

INTO THE RIVER.

TWO FIRES IN THE RIVERSIDE MILLS

When a Section of the Walls Falls Into the River, Carrying with It a Dozen Men Who Were at Work.

Augusta, Ga., January 10 .- [Special.]-The Riverside mills, a waste and bagging factory on the bank of the Savannah river, in this city, has had a fiery time this afternoon. THE FIRST FIRE.

Firre was first discovered in the basement storeroom, where about 500 bales of paper stock were stored. This fire was extinguished by the fire apparatus of the mill and no alarm was sent in. THE SECOND FIRE.

While the hands were busy, rolling out the damaged bales from the basement to the yard this afternoon, a second fire was discovered in the storeroom in the second story, two floors above, and a hundred feet back of the first fire. This room contained about two thousand rolls of bagging and seven hundred and ninetysix bales of paper stock.

This fire was seen to be dangerous, and the alarm was turned in, which was in turn supplemented by the general alarm when the fire department discovered the situation of things. After about four hours hard work the fire had been conquered, but water was still being thrown on the building and smouldering DOWN IN THE RUINS.

A score of men were busy in the second story throwing out rolls of bagging and bales of waste cotton from the windows, when at 8:15 o'clock a section of about fifty feet of the wall of the mill nearest the river fell, carrying down with it the roof overhead, and the floor of the second story. About a dozen men were caught in the ruins. Cotton bales, bagging rolls, bricks, mortar, and men were heaped up indiscriminately. After an hour or two's work, ten men were taken out, and marvelous to relate, not one had a broken bone. Bruises, sprains and two of them internal injuries, probably serious, but not a man with a broken bone. The bales of waste and rolls of bagging saved the men's lives.

THE INJURED MEN. Some of the men were caught between bales and others were protected from the rocks and imbers by them. Here is the list:

JOE McCORD, ANDREW WILSON and REUBEN WILLIAMS, were the three negroes nternally injured.

JOE KING'S nose mashed and face cut.

STEPHEN ZEKE, sprained knee.
PRINCE GARDNER, generally bruised and LOUIS COBB, shoulder bruised. PHIL GALPHIN, cut in head and badly bruised

WILLIAM McGINN, (white), ankle sprained and spine injured.

D. J. RIORDAN, (white), legs mashed.

It is possible that others may be under the ruins, but such is not believed to be the case. THE ESTIMATED DAMAGE. The damage to the mill and stock may reach twenty thousand dollars, but this amount will probably be reduced by salvage. The entire loss is fully covered by insurance in eastern manufacturing mutual insurance com

HIS COLLAR BONE BROKEN. An Old Man Suffers from an Accident on Decatur Street. Old man Bill Sutton, a machinist, who lives on Marietta street, was passing through an alley between Calhoun and Butler streets yesterday, when he was struck by a runaway team.

The berse and bugry belonged to Tom Jackson.

While the men were harnessing them, in Morris's wagonyard, the horse took fright and ran away, passing through the alley.

The horse struck Mr. Sutton and knocked him off the sidewalk. When he was picked up it was found that his collar-bone was broken on the right side, and Dr. Collier was called in and dressed the wound.

Mr. Sutton was sent to his home, on Marietta street, where he was resting easily at a late hour last night. when he was struck by a runaway team

Does Experience Count?

It does, in every line of business, and especially in compounding and preparing medicines. This is illustrated in the great superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla over other preparations, as shown by the remarkable cures it has accomplished.

The head of the firm of C. I. Hood & Co. is a thoroughly competent and experienced phar macist, having devoted his whole life to the study and actual preparation of medicines He is also a member of the Massachusetts and American Pharmaceutical Associations, and continues actively devoted to supervising the preparation of and managing the business connected with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Hence the superiority and peculiar merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla is built upon the most substantial foundation. In its preparation there is represented all the knowledge which modern research in medical science has developed, combined with long experience, brain-work, and experiment. It is only necessary to give this medicine a fair trial to realize its great curative value.

"For years I have been afflicted with bad Digestion, Constipation and Piles. I have tried all the medicines I could get hold of but all in vain. Even my physicians could not relieve my costiveness. In the meantime I struggled under great pain. Life was a burden. Two weeks ago I saw the Chicago "Times," and my eyo fell on an advertisement of Tutt's Pills. I decided to try them. They have worked wynderfully. They keep me regular, don't make me sick, give me an appetite and are curing my piles. I am strong and can walk any distance. If I had had these pills five years ago they would have saved me $10,000; but they have saved my life. Let the afflicted everywhere know their yalue, which is beyond expression."

HOUSE OF REFUGE.

The Arrangements for Tomorrow's Mass Meeting Completed.

The sub-committee, appointed to arrange the details of the public meeting of citizens to con-details of the public meeting of citizens to consider the question of a reformatory for juvenile offenders, and for the care of the child-waifs of the city streets, met yesterday afternoon in the chambers of Judge Van Epps.

The mass meeting will be held tomorrow, Sunday night, in the opera house, beginning at 7:45.

Most, if not all, of the churches of the city will be closed on Sabbath night, and their congregations and the citizens generally are invited to be present. The ladies will attend in large numbers and will be cordially received.

Judge Van Epps said yesterday afternoon, in reference to the need of the home: "The argument is all in a nut shell. As I said in my report ment is all in a nut shell. As I said in my report to the city council, 'it is wiser, and less expensive to save children, than to punish criminals.' Why should we let these children go to the unalterable bad and the unspeakable worst, and make no effort in their behalf to save them from lives fort in their behalf to save them from lives of shame and crime? We will have, sooner or later, to put our hands in our pockets and spend liberally in the shape of taxes for their conviction and punishment to defend society and the property of the citizens against them. We can take them now, and if the management of this home is what we design it to be, and what it has been in other great states of the union, we can redeem eight out of every ten of them, and restore them to society, useful and self-respecting members of it, instead of its lifelong foes."

The following gentlemen have been invited to speak, and the meeting is likely to be in every way derightful and profitable: Dr. I. S. Hopkins, Bishop Beckwith, Hon. N. J. Hammond, Dr. J. B. Hawthorne, Judge Howard Van Epps, Mayor Glenn, Dr. H. C. Morrison and Dr. Chaney.

The committee request the ministers of all the churches to announce the meeting at the morning service tomorrow, and themselves to find seats with the committee on the stage.

"Sweet Lavender." We are more than pleased to announce the engagement of Daniel Frohman's Lyceum Theater mpany in an elaborate production of the big success that held the stage at Terry's theater, London, for 720 performances and the Lyceum in New York one entire year, namely, "Sweet Laven-der." An enthusiastic critic says: "After seeing Sweet Lavender you feel as one might feel after Sweet Lavender you feel as one might feel after walking in a garden on a summer morning and inhaling the pure air of heaven, redolent with the odor of beautiful flowers — you feel purer, happier, better. Have you ever read Little Lord Fauntleroy? Sweet Lavender is such a play as Lord Fauntleroy is a story. Its meral, or rather the tenor of its sentiments, is that love, springing pure from the depths of an innocent heart, is more powerful than pride—pride of which it has been said; There is no affection of the mind so much blended in human nature and wronglit into our very constitution, as pride. It appears under a multitude of disguises and breaks out in ten thousand symptoms. Every one feels it in himself, and yet wonders to see it in his neighbors."

The Stowaway. for the first time in Atlanta next week. All of the cold realism of water tanks, fire en nodern stage invention will be discounted by a scene in which two genuine burglars, fresh from scene in which two genuine burgiars, fresh from the penitentiary, will give an object lesson in burglary. Duly provided with an uncracked safe and all of the necessary implements of their pro-fession they will burgle in full view of, the audience, and thus mark another astonishing ad-audience, and thus mark another astonishing advance in stage realism.

The play which is made the vehicle for this innovation is 'The Stowaway.' not a new and untried play by any means. It has been successfully running in England for the past five years, and has been one of the melodramatic triumphs of London. It was first produced in this country a year ago, and immediately won recognition and remown, and largely enriched its management.

The reason for the uniformly great success that it has everywhere achieved may be attributed to its strong human interest, the velo of pure comedy

THOSE HEADSTONES.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION: Inquiries having been nade with reference to the relative bids made by the several parties who were competing for the contract to furnish marble headstones for the some misapprehension, did not arrive until some time after the meeting had adjourned. Respec-fully, Mrs. JOHN MILLEGGS, January 10, '90.

The Artesian Water.

The erection of the artesian well I opposed, because of the great expense, but once in operation and using the water, I soon realized its great utility in furnishing good, wholesome water, better than any public water I have used in forty years in our city. I do not ouestion involvement. years in our city. I do not question improvement might be made in extending its depth at greater costs, but to do away with its use should not be thought of, as no healthier water can be afforded from any other source. I use a great deal of water, and none agrees with me like the artesian water of the city of Atlanta, which, as a city, we should be proud of.

EXPERIENCE.

The Artesian Well and Its Water.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION: I was pleased to read in The CONSTITUTION: I was pleased to read in The CONSTITUTION Mr. J. C. Kimball's letter upon this subject, and regard his vives as worthy of consideration by our city authorities. I beg leave to add a thought or two, and on this, to the people of Atlanta, important subject.

If I mistake not, the pump of the artesian well works by means of a piston rod, extending from 1,000 to 1,100 feet below the top of the solid granite formation, and is there moved up and down in a space say of about three feet. Every time the piston comes up it brings the water from below the lower or stationary valve, thus affording the main supply of water from that depth; and at the same time pressing back the water, including the surface, water, which inclines to entire the well above the pump.

It is true, as Mr. Kimball probably thinks, every time the pump piston goes down the surface water may enter, if there are any leaks in the pipe above the pump. But most assuredly the main supply of water comes from below the pump, as the well is about 2,000 feet deep, and now to claim that the water from that depth, and through 700 or 800 feet of solid granite, has changed its ingredients and become contaminated since the well was made, is too absurd and ridiulous for any person of common sense and good judgment to believe.

In the name of all that is just and right, do not let this city be plunged into millions more of debt to bring water from the Chattahoochie until the artesian well question can be fully tested by the expenditure of $30,000 or $40,000 more. Respectfully yours,

January 10, 1800. The Artesian Well and Its Water.

ATLANTA, GA., JANUARY 11, 1890.

Ballot Reform.

It is curious to read the attacks made or Governor Hill, of New York, because he refused to indorse a foreign system of voting. One republican paper says that the governor is a fraud, a hypocrite, and a corruptionist. Another says that he is a political mountebank. Even the Herald, which usually broods over matters of public concern with an air of impartiality, remarks that the document which the governor sends to the legislature may be called "Hill's anti-reform message.

And yet this whole matter is so intimately connected with the rights and liberties of the citizens that it cannot be examined too carefully or discussed too thoroughly. It is neither just nor fair to say that because a person is opposed to a foreign system of voting he is therefore opposed to ballot re-No particular reform is important enough to demand the arraignment of those who discuss or investigate it. Does it follow because the Australian system has been successful under a government in which suffrage is a farce, that it ought to be applied to the American voter? Has it already become such a sacred affair that those who refuse to indorse it are hypocrites and corruptionists? It does not follow, as Governor Hill well says, that "because the Australian system seems to be well adapted to the governments of Australia and England, and is superior to the systems which previously existed there, it can be appropriately applied to our institutions without its material modification. Those governments are founded upon the theory that the state should undertake to perform every service that it can perform, while the true theory of our institutions is that the the state should do nothing that can better or as well be done by the free and untrammeled action of the individual citizen. To vest the greatest control and power of interference in the government is the object of their laws, while the intent of ours is to confer upon the people the largest liberty and the greatest personal privileges consist-ent with the public welfare. It should not be forgotten, also, that universal suffrage does not exist in Australia and Great Britain, but the election systems there are based upon a restricted suffrage. That this difference of conditions is recognized by the friends of the Australian system in this country is shown by the fact that the system, in its entirety, has not been adopted by any state in the union. Several states, with constitutions more friendly to it than our own, have enacted what is called the Australian system, but only after material and vital modifications. This adaptation by various states of different features of the system appears to have produced a confused impression in the public mind as to what the system really is." This whole matter is perhaps more important than the enthusiasts are willing to admit. It is too important, for instance, to admit of hasty action. Ballot reform is not as necessary in this country as the individual liberty of the citizen: This is a fact that some of the reformers threaten to lose sight of.

A Brilliant Democratic Outlook.

The outlook for the democratic party was ever better for success in a presidential election than it is for 1892.

It is admitted that President Harrison is the weakest man that has ever been president of the United States. He is moved by petty jealousies and personal feelings that would cause remark in the administration of ward politics, Designing men in his party have taken advantage of these weaknesses, and have been very successful in completely capturing him. The anti-Blaine men in the state of New York have made him believe that if he followed Blaine's advice it would be understood that Blaine was running his administration, and he has virtually surrendered the New York patronage of his party to "Meoo" Platt and his followers, much to the disgust of many good republicans of that state. He panders to the extreme element of his party in New England, and the conservative voters are denouncing him in one breath and praising ex-President Cleveland in the next.

In the west the feeling against the repub lican president is more pronounced than in the east. In Indiana he has disgusted all fair-minded men by his earnest efforts to get all his kinspeople in office; his administration of the great office being more personal than national. In the south he has absolutely turned over his administration to the carpet-bag element of his party, whose only recommendation is its influence on the negro vote, and it promises to make the south solid for Harrison for a second nomination.

All this is good for the democratic party, but this is not all.

The position the president takes in his annual message, or, more properly speaking, the position he did not take on the silver question, has done him infinite injury. His vacillating course in the treatment of this question, in which millions of the poorer class of his constituents are vitally interested, and his readiness to indorse the views of the plutocrats who get rich by squeezing the masses, would alone be such a burthen on a candidate for president that all the eloquence in his party, if united and willing, could not explain away or palliate.

Fortunately, his covert position on the silver question is directly antagonized by principles of the democratic party that are as old as the party itself, and the unstatesmanlike manner in which the president treats this grave question is due to the fact that he has sense enough to know that, led as he was, and blindfolded as he must have been by the smooth palms of the plutocrats, he knew he was treading on dangerous ground. The success of the democratic party de pends entirely on our managers. The only hope the republicans have is that the democrats will do something foolish before the election that will bring about defeat. We believe they will be deceived, and that Mr. Harrison, for he will undoubtedly be renominated, will be the easiest man defeated that was ever nominated by the republican party. He is not only a bitter partizan, but he goes further; he is selfish and personal in all his dealings, and such a man cannot rest well on the presidential bosom of this great democratic people.

No president since General Grant's day has ever shown such a thorough contempt for the civil service laws of congress not in words, but in acts, which speak louder than words. He has been called upon to deny charges of complicity with Mahone in the Virginia election, where it was plainly apparent that he virtually turned over the patronage of the party to Mahone, to be used to republicanize the state. Mahone has never denied it; the parties interested. and who were the beneficiaries of this dis reputable scheme, have never denied it, and the charge stands with the simple statement from the president of the United States that he was not responsible for Mahone's candidacy or his defeat, without any explanation as to who was responsible for the dis reputable use of the administration in that election. He knew it was going on; he permitted it, and no man in the United States but the president could have stopped

The record of the appointees of the presilent in the pension department of the government is a cheerful one for the democrats. They have acted so as to bring forth de nunciations from every respectable republican source, and the president was driven to turn several of them out, and in doing so incovered the most flagrant and corrupt conduct, the story of half of which has not been printed. Viewing the situation as it is today, we say, without doubt, that the democratic outlook is all that could be desired.

"The Father of the House."

The death of the Hon. William D. Kelley, of Pennsylvania, will be sincerely regretted throughout the country.

Judge Kelley was a splendid type of our self-made men. He was a stanch republican, but he was not willing to sacrifice everything for the interests of his party. In great emergencies he showed that he was able to sink the partisan in the patriot.

When the war ended Judge Kelley was among the first of the republican leaders to recognize the possibilities and protentialties of the new south. Even when the reconstruction excitement was at its height, the Pennsylvania statesman found time to suggest that business was a bigger thing than politics. His speech during that period fore a rather turbulent crowd in this city was a model address. He did not utter a word that was calculated to inflame the passions or excite bitter feelings. Turning aside from sectional and party issues, he spoke of the inexhaustible natural resources of the south, and urged the people to make every drop of water that rolled from the mountains to the sea pay tribute to the ingenuity and industry of man. Until the day of his death he continued on that line, and southern progress had no warmer and more ac-

"The Father of the House," as he was called on account of his long and continuous service in the lower branch of congress, will not soon be forgotten. He had a big brainand a big heart.

A Funny Man.

The fact that there is such a thing as a Foraker club in Columbus has just come to light. It is not a very important fact, except in its character as evidence that a man can never be too small to have something or other named after him.

J. B. Foraker has just appeared before the Foraker club in order to take farewell of the public. His appearance is in the nature of an advertisement, though it is not as important as some of the green grocery amouncements we have seen.

The thing that seems to strike Foraker is the supposition that his disappearance will leave a very large hole that can only be filled at great expense to the country and to the state. In his speech Foraker calls attention to the importance of republicanism, and remarks that after he is gone there will be some pretty heavy work left for somebody to do.

All this sort of thing is not one of the symptoms of greatness, but it passes for that in parts of Ohio, especially in the western reserve. The tremendous nature of Foraker's defeat is shown, as we gather from his farewell remarks, by the Christmas fights and riots in all parts of the country, especially in the south, and he seems to be lieve that this species of amusement will continue to increase until he is again recalled to office.

Foraker is a very funny man.

The Reformitory Movement. A mass-meeting of the citizens of Atlanta will be held at DeGive's opera house on Sunday night next, to consider the establishment of a reformatory for juvenile offenders To those who frequent the court rooms of the state, no argument is needed as to the necessity for such an institution. At every session of the superior courts of the state children in years are condemned to association with hardened criminals in the convict camps. These facts once known to the good people of the state, they would be certain to supply the needed reformatory to which juvenile offenders should be sent.

ended. Brunswick's Nerve.

The mass-meeting should be well at

The Times says that Glynn county bor rowed $1,226,394.92 on real estate last year, and nearly every dollar of it was used in Brunswick; a part of it to secure deferred payments on the purchase money of real estate, but the greater portion for improve-ments. Editor Branham thinks it is evience of unusual prosperity when a town of 12,000 people borrows a million and a warter to put into improvements.

"The fact is, says the Times, the activity n real estate in Brunswick last year was remarkable. Some transactions were enornous, but the larger number were not speculative, and were therefore small. The latter fact is interesting, because it means that the purchasers in most of the smaller transactions were actual settlers. The Times has not yet been able to ascertain the total sum invested in this way, but the information at hand indicates that it went up into millions. mprovements on real estate in Bruns wick last year were well nigh numberless On every street and square abundant proof of this assertion may be seen."

This shows that the people of Brunswick have unbounded faith in their town, and that they have the nerve to back their judgment with tremendous investment even in advance of their earnings.

Faith and nerve like this are sure to build a town. They make people too sanguine sometimes and cause temporary trouble by too fast a gait, but the investments are sure to count. You can hardly put your finger on a southern boom that has not done lasting good to the town it touched. Individuals get careless and are caught occasionally, but their investments remain and the town profits by them.

Southern booms have left few individual calamities in their wake. The usual consequence of the excitement is that the town makes a leap forward, overstrains itself a little, rests a while, and goes on at a brisker pace than ever. In a boom, final perseverance is the winning card. The man who does not take on a heavier load than he can carry is dead sure to win if he swings on. In real estate "all things come to him who

A Pitiful Creature.

The proposition of Editor Shepard to contribute five hundred dollars to the Grady monument on condition that he be allowed to write the inscriptions, has been pretty widely copied in the newspapers of the cour try, and always with some words of comment.

It may be that Editor Shepard fails to read his exchanges; he may regard it as in the line of worldliness to do so; but if he has paid attention to what they have had to say in regard to his offer he has learned a lesson that may, in the end, do him a world of good. We understand, of course, that his skin is thick—the methods of a Peckshiff are always protected by some such armor as the lack of sensibility-but if he has read the comments on his proposition and profited by them, he will be henceforth a changed man, and, it is to be hoped, a wiser one; for, from one end of the country to the other, in every newspaper of the land, his proposition has been treated with the contempt it deserved. The spirit of it is thoroughly understood, and its meanness has been condemned in all quarters. The kindest comments that have been made on it appeared in these columns, and their kindness was based on a remembrance of the pitying charitableness with which Mr. Grady regarded the proprietor of the Mail and

The meaning of Editor Shepard's propos tion was understood and discounted by those who were near to Mr. Grady. Its ineffable meanness was apparent to the whole country. This, however, was not enough for Editor

Shepard. He has followed the meanness of his proposition by an infamous charge against the name and memory of Mr. Grady, and this the country also understands. He has charged that Mr. Grady had one face for the north and another for the south, whereas, the beauty of the dead editor's character was its transparency. He never uttered a sentiment anywhere and at any time that was not a part of his life, and that was not reiterated over and over again in these editorial columns. Not a word that he ever uttered, not a line that he ever wrote, was contrary to the patriotic impulses and the long-studied policy that endeared him to the sane people of the nation.

We refrain from characterizing the infamous charge of Editor Shepard as it deserves.

figures of aggregate wealth, the amount per head of our population would per head of our population would be $945; or about the same as France and considerably less than Great Britain and Ireland. *Commenting on its own figures, the World says: "The wealth of the United States now exceeds the total wealth of the whole world at an exceeds the total wealth of the whole world at any time previous to the middle of the eighteenth century, and the amount invested abroad is alone equal to the national wealth of Portugal and Denmark. The total wealth of only five nations is equal to the mere increase of the United States in the last nine years." Still the ratio of increase was greater in the decade between 1850 and 1860 than at any subsequent or prior period. than at any subsequent or prior period.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE says: "The destruction of human life by our railways is attaining truly alarming proportions. According to the estimate of the interstate commerce commissioners, the mortality from this cause in a single year is as high as 5,693, while for the same period the number of persons injured in railroad accidents reaches 27,888. Of course a great proportion in both classes is made up of railway employes. Legislation by congress for the protection of trainmen, as recommended by the president, is greatly to be desired, in view of the facts thus sented, and legislation by the states with the object of abolishing grade crossings would r nove another fruitful source of danger.

A BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTE.

The last issue of the Christian Advocate, pubtribute to the late Henry W. Grady. Among other things it says:
"He was a born optimist. In his blood and nerves, in every cell of his brain, in every beat of his heart, in every fiber of his body, he was an optimist. He came into active life just when the south, rallyingifrom the shock of the awful cata-clysm that had struck her, was catching the breath of the morning of its new day. He typed, her new chivalry, whose invincible fortitude, un-dying hopefulness, and audaeious enterprise in this time of peace make them worthy successors of the old chivalry that never told a lie, nor stole a dollar, nor showed its back to a foe in equal combat. Young Henry Grady was the prophet of the new dispensation. There was a cheerful contagion in his presence and in what he wrote and spoke. His newspaper, The Constitution, reflected the mai The reading of it was a tonic to the weak, a stin ulus to flagging hope and energy. When he spoke his people yielded to the persuasion, kindled into responsive enthusiasm, and moved with him in the forward march.

He must have been a genuiue man and a patriot. The glow that was in his periods was not merely rhetorical. When he talked of his native south the throb of undying and tenderest filial affection was felt in every musical syllable. When he spoke of the negro race while there was no evasion or concealment of the facts as he saw them, his words reflected the kindly and generous spirit of that true south whose history has yet to be written by some friendly hand, and of which he might be taken as the representative and exponent, both in his opin-ions and character. When he spoke of the north, amid the sparkle of his wit and his playful persifiage, there was a breadth of thought and of sym pathy, a hearty recognition of what was true and good and great in that section, a fervor of patriotic feeling, and a flavor of genuine nationalit that stamped him as an American citizen whose patriotism was as broad as the republic, and whose eloquence, winning the plaudits of all sections alike, was the eloquence of the heart.

If These two characteristics—his lunquenchable hopefulness and his broad philanthropy that embraced all classes and all sections-would have lifted him above the dead level of his contempo raries, even had he been less richly endowed in tellectually. When the jewel of genius is foun fit such a setting of character, the gem is of ines-timable value. * * The eagle's plumes will timable value. The eagle's plumes will not be soiled by any malign touch of envy or hate. The dear Georgia mother to whom he sent the dying message, "Pray for me," longing to lay his throbbing head at the last upon the bosom where it first nestled in chilhood, and that other mother, the south, he loved so passionately, may give him not without pain, but with all the consolar that can soften a mighty sorrow. Let the monu-ment, which will be erected to his memory in At lanta, the city he helped to create, be not a broker column, symbolic of incompleteness, but a shaft-tall, stately and graceful—crowned with the noble figure of the orator, in the beauty and power of splendid young manhood, in speaking attitude the bronze lips parted as if he were uttering perpetual benediction upon the land he loved." Empty Was the Wagon.—Uncle Jill Pariss was nonplussed yesterday.

He was called out into north Atlanta by Office. Bruce Harris, who had captured Tun Weaver, one of the most notorious of all the boy thieves. Uncle Jim drove out witif the new Black Maria, and there was no lock on the rear. None has ever been put on it. He put the boy inside, pulled down the lover and started toward the station. down the lever and started toward the stati nonse, jogging along leisurely, as is his custom. A crowd of young negro boys followed the wages and one of them slipped up slyly and lifted the bar. The door opened easily, and Weaver leased out and ran like a frightened deer. The rescuer closed the door softly, leaped to the ground and ran likewise.

Uncle Jim was unconscious of his loss until arrived at the station house and opened the of the Black Maria.
"Come out, Tom."
"No Tom answered."

Well, where in the nation is that boy," said

Uncle Jim, as he peered inside the wagon.
"Well, I'll — why, he's gone!" and the expression that came over the features of the external policeman was one of the most intense disgust and mortification. The boys had the laugh on Uncle Jim, but Ton

Weaver is still at large.

The Best Method to Be Adopted by Farmer Who Find It Necessary to Butcher in

Commissioner of Agriculture Henderson has received a number of communications lately, from farmers all over the state, complaining that the warm weather had seriously inter-fered with the usual killing of hogs, cattle, and other animals, and asking his advice as to and other animals, and asking his divice as to the best method of preserving meat, when it became necessary to kill in warm weather. After examining a number of the most ap-proved methods, Judge Henderson has select-ed the one he considers the best, and advises the farmers of Georgia in the following cir-proved methods, Judge Henderson has selectived the one he considers the best, and advises the farmers of Georgia in the following circular:

Owing to the phenomenal warm weather that has prevailed throughout the present season, with only one exception, many inquiries are being made, and great interest is felt by almost every one as to the best method of preserving their fresh meat. Several state that the large surplus of corn with which the country was blessed, has already been consumed, and that farmers are now drawing on the reserve crop, so necessary with which to make another crop. The hogs, I am told, are, almost without exception, not only fat, but very fat, and the question is how to manage it without loss, and thus save the crib from further depletion. Not anticipating a remote possibility of such a state of things, I, of course, am to a large extent unprepared for it. Have appealed to many who I supposed equal by reason of experience, to such an emergency, but thus far have been unable to get anything better than the recipe given below. In presenting this recipe I am aware of the inadequacy of the country to supply the barrels that will at once be in demand should the receipt for pickling be generally adopted. I do not know how things may stand now, but before and during the war scarcely a farmer from Macon southward in this state but what had large troughs, dugmainly out of cypress logs, and devoted almost exclusively to curing and pickling pork. The presumption is that many through that section of the state have them still on hand. If so, the work of pickling toth textent will be rendered easy Barre's may be obtained, to a certain extent, from Macon northward, and where the barrels cannot be obtained, may not boxes be improvised in a very few days and made both air and water tight, so that the sides—middlings—of the hogs being free from bone, might be put up differently from joints, which will surely spoil unless pickled according to the recipe given or some better plan. I have the fullest confidence recipe:

First, salt the meat down beavily while warm and let it stay for twelve hours; then knock off the salt and pack in barrels, and to every hundred pounds of pork, pour over a liquid made as follows: Dissolve eight pounds of salt, one quart of molasses, four ounces of saltpetre, four ounces of soda, four ounces of cayenne pepper, in eight gallons of water, and boil the compound, skimming until the seum ceases to rise. Let the liquid cool before using. Weight down the meat so as to keep submerged. The Annual Election of the Ladles' Auxiliary, the Young Men's Christian association was held yesterday afternoon at the Young Men's Christian association building. Reports for last year were read, showing, that during the twelve months, good work had been accomplished.

until the scum ceases to risc. Let the liquid cool before using. Weight down the meat so as to keep submerged.

Again, there are some who may prefer the ice cure, particularly parties who live on railroads and can get an abundant supply of ice. To such I would recommend an abundant use of ice until the animal heat has been thoroughly extracted from the ignits of the animal. After which apply salt-petre freely; also salt in such quantities as good judgment would dictate. If the greund is sufficiently cold, I would by all means advise putting the meat, particularly the joints, in direct contact with the cold ground. In this way I am quite sure the percentage of loss cannot be very great, and I hope no loss at all.

To show the abnormal condition of things, while I write, my mail brings a package of wheat, sown this fall, which is ten inches high another a small bundle of oats thoroughly headed out, which were sown in August. All of which is so phenomenal as to excite alarm.

Still another suggestion which strikes me with force is, render your sides into lard and then you are safe beyond all preadventure.

Lee can be had at 30 cents per hundred, in lots of one thousand pounds, at the Atlanta loe factory. It is presumed that no factory would think of extorting under such peculiar circumstances. Lee factories can be found in Atlanta, Augusta, Savannah, Macon, Rome, Athens, Columbus and doubtless at other points in the state.

The professor lived in Atlanta several years, and was then quite well known. Some six years ago he went to Florida, where he passed two or three years. Then he came back to Atlanta and told some wonderful stories about a fine orange grove he owned in that state. The grove was a valuable one, and Hull soon found himself surrounded by friends. His grove in Florida gave him a credit which continued until he and the lady with whom he was boarding had a misunderstanding about a board bill. This misunderstanding led to the professor's arrest, and when he was released a watch, he had carried a long time, was pledged for the bill.

Hull's brother, who lives on Decatur street, is a hard-working, deserving young man, holding a responsible position in one of Atlanta's large stores. Of course his feelings are with his brother, who he thinks has been wronged. The Atlanta Hull was asked yesterday where his brother could be found.

"He is at my home on Decatur street," was the answer.

"He is a my notate answer.
"Would I find him there now?" he was asked.
"I don't know. He was in West Point last night and I suppose he may be at home now."
A call at the Hull home, however, showed that the professor was not there and that he had been absent nearly all day. A thorough search failed to locate the professor, and last night it was rumored that he had left the city, but those who know the professor do not believe that he has gone.

The Hull's came to Atlanta from the northwest.

For several years they lived in Minnesota where they owned a farm. The farm adjoined one owned by Mr. Baldwin, of the Atlanta Engraving company. Mr. Baldwin knew the Hulls well, and says that they were all industrious; hardworking boys.

The West Point Press, which came in yesterday rints a brief account of Hull's banishment from prints a brief account of Hull's banishment from that place. It says:

J. A. B. Hull left West Point last Saturday night by order of a committee. Hull has been a music teacher there for about two years, and for a time was highly respected by our best people. But information was obtained to prove that his conduct recently was anything but that of a gentleman, hence he was notified to move out at once. His escape was a narrow one, for the committee thought he ought to have thirty-nine lashes or a coat of tar and feathers. The cooler heads prevailed upon the committee, however, to let him go quietly and carry his disgrace with him, and so he was allowed to go unharmed.

Hull is well known in Atlanta, and he is just brazen enough to go back there and attempt to associate with decent people, while facts go to prove he is as low in the scale of decency as it is possible to fall.

senting the lifework of the lamented Grady—"His Great Work Unfinished." There is an unfinished statue representing the north and the south. The "South" and the "North" are represented by two women, each with an arm about the other. The base of the statue is unfinished.

Near the statue is a model, showing what the sculptor designed his great work to be. On the base of the nodel is the motto: "Perfect Unity and Love." These words have not yet been inscribed on the unfinished base of the statue. The sculptor's tools are lying about the model.

On a small stand is a scatue of America with Liberty as a shield. Above this is the following quotation from the last speech of Mr. Grady:

"This hour little needs the loyalty that is loyal to one section and yet holds the other in enduring suspicion and estrangement. Give us the broad and perfect loyalty that loves and trusts Georgia alike with Massachusetts—that knows no south, no north, no east, no west, but endears with equal and patriotic love every foot of our soil, every state of our union."

 THE STOCK MARKET.

The Day on the Floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK, January 10.—In the stock market today, especially during the forenoon, the entire interest in speculation was monopolized by sugar refineries and Reading stocks, the remainder, even of coal stocks, being dull and uninteresting with extremely narrow fluctuations. Later in the day trading in the two leaders slacked off and many of the specialties were taken in hand and many of the specialties were taken in hand and material advances were established on a much larger business, which extended to the general list. The opening of sugar was made at a concession from last night's prices of 1½ per cent on the announcement that an injunction had been obtained against the payment of any more dividends or the conveyance of any of its property to any other conveyance of any of the trust loan came out with a state-treasurer of the trust loan came out with a statetreasurer of the trust loan came out with a statement that the late assertions in regard to the comparative output of trust refineries and independent ones, was erroneous; that there were no funds at present in the hands of the trustees, and that at present in the hands of the trustees, and that there was no intention of conveying any property while the injunction was only temporary. Traders thereupon proceeded to cover their shorts upon the ground that all the bad uews was out, and in the afternoon, when the market assumed a more healthy appearance it rallied 2½ per cent. A drive was made at Reading in the early dealings, but its price was forced off a traction only, and some of the large forcing houses. in the early dealings, but its price was forced off a fraction only, and some of the large foreign houses appeared with buying orders, which gradually ifted its price above 37. The demand resulted in more activity for the stock, though there was plenty of it for sale. The declines in incomes failed to have any appreciable effect upon it, however. The general list, ofter opening of fractionally generally, recovered these losses in the afternoon and the close was quiet but firm, at fractions better than the opening figures. Money fractions better than the opening figures. Money was easy, but showed a stiffening tendency, and less business was done under the legal rate. The list conignt is generally higher, and Delaware and Hudson, which became prominent in the last hour, rose 2½, Texas land trust 1½, Wheeling and Lake Exchange quiet and strong at 483@487.

NEW YORK, January 10 — [Special.]—A further advance of about five points occurred today throughout the entire list of options, bringing the prices up to about 30 points since the upward reservement began. The trading was brisk and the fluctuations sharp. The light interior movement and heavy exports of cotton from the south to Europe were the principal bull features that came to the surface today. They were used to the fullest extent by the manipulators of the market to est extent by the manipulators of the market to further their ends, and despite the heavy pressure brought to bear in resisting the advance, values steadily improved, closing firm at the top with sales of 141,500 bales. The southern and late Livermook advices served. saies of 141,000 baies. The southern and late Liverpool advices came in firmer, and this, together with the heavy export demand, rendered the situation stronger at the close. It seems that after such a sharp advance that a reaction is about due, but whather it will come or not remains to be seen. out whether it will come or not rema but whether it will come or not remains to be seen, as everything seems to hinge for the moment on the Liverpool market and receipts. In this market spots were firm and unchanged, while in the southern markets Galveston, Mobile and Augusta are 1-16c and Wilmington 1/6c higher. The receipts

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Features of the Speculative Movement in Grain and Provisions. Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, January 10—The wheat market was quiet, and there was no special feature to note. Fluctuations were confined within narrow limits, and prices did not vary particularly from yesterday's closing. The opening was about the same as the close of yesterday, eased off %c, improved %c, receded again to inside figures, and closed %c lower than yesterday.

Corn was traded in to fair extent, the market opening firm. Transactions were largely in May, which received the most attention. The market opening firm the strong for a time, then became easier, declining %c%c, and closed a trifle lower than yesterday.

Oats were fairly active but weaker, and %c%c lower. More life was manifested in the market for hog products, and a larger business was reported than for some time past. Receipts of hogs were moderately free, and prices were well sustained. There was rather more pressure to sell and and short ribs than mess pork, consequently the latter showed more steadiness. Opening sales were mede at about outside figures, but a weaker feeling was developed later. During the latter

BREAKFAST TABLES. Fruits and Vegetables Take Advantage of the May Weather and Get Up a Surprise

Party. "Eight weeks ahead of my engagements," remarked a juvenile Onion, as it tried its remarked a javenine conon, as it the his strength on a green grocer's scales yesterday. "Ah, lettuce along" chimed some spruce-looking bunches of the soporific vegetable that were coddled in a corner close by.

"It's a cold day when we fail to turn up-"
But the hubbub inside the store drowned the rest of the conversation.

Inquiries among the green grocers estab lished the fact that there has been no need of importing early vegetables, except a few kinds, so far during the season.

The reason is that the home gardens furnish abundant supplies of young and tender vege-tables of many sorts, that are never marketed earlier than the last of March or the first of

"We have been selling vegetables grown right here in Atlanta," said Mr. T.C. Mayson yesterday, "ever since the fall, and the seasons have been so closely blended that it is hard to tell whether we are late in the fall or early in

On inquiry it was found that the prices of these vegetables or "truck," as our south Georgia neighbors say, are remarkably low.

Fresh lettuce, 5 cents a bunch. Spinach, 55 cents ? peck.

New shallots, 5 cents a bunch. Young onions, 5 cents

Spring turnips, 5 cents. Parsnips, 10 cents.

New cabbage, 5 cents a pound. New Florida celery (Monday), 75 cents a bunch.

"Why," said Mr. Mayson, "a friend told me that the figs were as big as your thumb on the trees already, and you know that is a sure

"How early is the season?"
"Eight weeks at least. We have placed crders for tomatoes and celery with Florida growers, and will have both in the market Monday."

"What do you know?" was the stereotyped question put to Mr. A. M. Shomo, wholesale fruit and vegetable dealer.

"I know that I have just received a letter from a Florida firm asking me to send them stencils to mark strawberry boxes. I never saw the like. But, I tell you, there is mighty little profit in apples and other fruits of that sort, because the rottage is so great. They seem to feel that their mission is filled and they are content to step down and out when the spring fruits put in their appearance."

"Where did you get those green cabbages?"

"We are getting them regularly from Charleston. Mobile and New Orleans, now, at least eight weeks ahead of time. Those fellows haven't had any time to take Christ-fellows haven't had any time to take Christmas down there, as yet; and I suppose they will wait till next Christmas, now."

"I have got Irish potatoes—new ones, under-stand—as big as bird eggs," said a West End gentlemen. "Kept them over?"

"Nept them over?"
"No, they just grew voluntarily. The tubers left in the ground from last summer's crop sprouted and began to grow. I laughed at them, and thought they were too previous. But the other day they seemed so much in earnest about it, I desided to investigate, and I grabbled a mess of delicious potatoes in a few minutes," few minutes.

"Suppose you had planted early?"
"I would have had all I wanted now. Itell you, it is phenomenal."
"I was treated to a most delicate and highly appreciated surprise yesterday," said Mr. Fillmore Goodwyn.
"Wall?"

"A box of rich, red, ripe strawberries,

"Florida?" "Florida?"

"No, from a young lady in Cobb county, who is just as sweet as—well, she is far ahead of any strawberry that ever grew; but when I received the box I was taken aback. They blossomed beneath the skies of December and ripened in the January sunshine; but they were just as delicately flavored; just as finally tinted; as though they had made their advent along with the clover blossons in May."

"Fresh fish?"
"Yes," said Mr. R. K. Redus, "but the demand is light. We have got lots of fish and oysters, but folks are going wild over 'garden sass,' and that is why the market is dull. We have no dressed poultry, because the weather is too warm."

The process in fish and oysters are as usual: Pompano, 15 cents a pound. Shad, 50 cents to $1 each.

Blackfish, 35 cents a string. Sheephead, 10 cents a pound.

Mobile plant oysters, 50 cents a quart. Selects, 40.
Savannalı, 25 to 30. Fresh eggs are coming in and the price has dropped from 30 to 25.

$6,000 for the handsomest lot on West Peachtree. It is 87x299 feet; is on top of the hill, fronts east, and has belgian blocks, water, gas, electric light and sewer in front of it, and the electric car line is half block distant; lies high and level, and has on it moderate improvements, renting for $18 a mionth. The carant ground is cheap at $75 per front foot. Terms one-third cash, balance 6, 12, 18 and 24 months, 8 per cent interest.

$200 per acre for 5½ acres on main public wagon road within ¾ of a mile of the electric car line; in an excellent neighborhood and locality, where property is rapidly enhancing in value. It fronts almost 900 feet on the road; lies high and is entirely covered with a heavy oak grove. Can be sub-divided to great advantage and a handsome profit made on it in the spring. This price holds good for a few days only, as the owner needs the money-now. Terms, only ½ cash, balance in 1 and 2 years at 8 per cent interest.

$5,250 will buy 41 large, high and shady lots on Pryor and other streets; very convenient to glass works and in less than five minutes' walk of the dummy line. A rare chance for speculation in buying now and selling at auction in the spring. Very liberal terms.

$2,500 for choice cottage home in West End, just half block from Gordon street and car line, and in excellent locality and neighborhood. Louse new, 6 rooms, wide hall and veranda; all nicely finished. Lot 60x270 feet; one of the nearest homes in West End. Terms will be made very liberal—a small cash payment monthly, or will exchange for property ov the North Side.

$1,200 for 24 acres on the Georgia railroad, just 7 miles from the city and 1 mile below Decatur. Trains stop at the place. All lies well, and the Decatur wagon road cuts it in two, thus making two road fronts and a front on the railroad. Small improvements on the place that rent well. Excellent neighborhood. A good bargain.

$5,500 for a very desirable Capitol avenue home on beautiful lot 60x210 feet. House has 5 rooms, all nicely papered and finished, bath-room, water and gas. ### FIVE PRISONERS ESCAPE

FROM FULTON COUNTY JAIL YESTER-

ers in the Recently Erected Revenue Prison Take a Door from Its Hinges, Scale a High Fence and Escape.

Five moonshiners escaped from Fulton county jail yesterday morning between 3 and 4 o'clock. Fifty could have made their escape had they been so inclined. The prisoners who escaped were John Brack-ett, of Flat Branch, Gilmer county; T. N. Smith and John Hood, of Habersham county, and J. C. Satterfield and T. C. Bryant, of

Only one of the five had been sentenced, and he had served half of his term out, six months That one was John Brackett. Smith plead guilty before Judge Newman last Thursday, but sentence was suspended until yesterday, at least it was the intention of the court to sentence Smith yesterday had it not been for his escape. The other three had never been before the United States court for trial.

Smith is supposed to be the leader of the outbreak, as he has the reputation of a dan-ELDER FLOWER LOTION The five men who escaped were confined in the new building erected for the revenue prisoners, and their escape was only made possible by the faulty construction of the jail.

The whole building is of wood, and the main door, leading into the hallway, is hung on or-dinary gate hinges. Each end of these gate hinges is fastened by means of three small bolts and nuts. The nuts were screwed on from the inside, and it was by unscrewing them that the door was opened and removed. The threaded ends of the bolts were not clinched or spread, so that the nuts were easily loosened from that end of the hinge fastened to the door.

While enjoying their outdoor exercise the prisoners had picked up a small piece of metal, used in attaching the sides to the ends of bedsteads. This was used as a wrench for ur screwing the nuts. The escape was effected between the rounds of the watchman, every half hour. Just at what hour the men took their leave is no known, but it is certain that it occurred after 1 o'clock, as at that time everying was all right when Jailor Osborne made his last in-

The moonshiners were so clever in their The moonshiners were so clever in their work that no visible traces were left about the building. As soon as the five men had walked out the door, presumably after the watchman had completed one of his half-hour rounds, others on the inside quickly placed the hinges in their proper position again, so that on his next trip the roundsman noticed nothing out of place.

A fifteen-foot fence surrounds the jail build-A fitteen-toot ience surrounds the jail buildings. To overcome this the moonshiners used boards, leaning them against the fence and climbing over. From the top they dropped to the alley in the rear of the jail, and from there climbing over. From the top they dropped to the alley in the rear of the jail, and from there they reached the open street.

Jailer Osberne discovered the escape at 4 o'clock, when he went into the yard and found the boards leaning against the fence. He at once went to the revenue prison and then ascertained the number and names of the men who had escaped.

"There were about fifty in all confined in that building," said he yesterday, "and if they had been so minded all might have escaped. This is evident from the fact that some of those who remained replaced the door and screwed on the hinges."

Sheriff Thomas was notified of the escape of the moonshiners early yesterday morning. He at once took measures to have them recaptured, and offered a reward of $25 each for their apprehension.

The names and addresses were furnished the sheriff by Jailor Osborne. Sheriff Thomas communicated with the revenue authorities, who assured him of their hearty assistance in recovering the prisoners. They think the men will be caught without much trouble.

Jailer Poole and one of the watchmen were leant from the interest the results and the sheriff them the interest and the prisoners.

men will be caught without much trouble.

Jailer Poole and one of the watchmen were absent from the jail on Thursday night, Mr. Poole having been called suddenly to the bedside of a sick brother. The escape, however, is not charged to their absence, but it is the opinion of all the officials that under the circumstances the moonshiners would have gotten out anyhow.

Special Meeting of Men.

Rev. J. W. Heidt will conduct the special meing for men only at the Young Men's Christassociation tomorrow afternoon, at 3:30 o'clo All men, young men and strangers especially, invited.

Here is a good suggestion: You cannot ap reciate how strong it is unless you go on the remises and look at the ground. A bridge can be built, as suggested by Dr. Hodgson, across from foot of Alabama to the foot of Spring street that will be very convenient for the citizens of Atlanta, and as the matter is before the city council, it is to be hoped some action will be taken looking to the develop-ment of this plan. This bridge and the one on Forsyth effect is very much needed, and the sooner built the sooner will the city derive more taxes from the enhanced value of land. It will be a great saving of time and trouble in onnecting north and south Atlanta. This is connecting north and south Atlanta. This is what Dr. Hodgson suggests:

ATLANTA, Ga., January 16.—Editors Constintion: If you will walk out Alabama street to the end of those stores on the east side going north you will find yourself upon a bluff fifteen or more feet above the railway tracks; then look at the elevator near the foot of Spring street, you will see, that all that is necessary to thite Alabama street with Marietta street is an iron bridge, same width as the Broad street one, at once giving a connection with north and south Atlanta; one much shorter for two-thirds of all the manufactured goods that are shipped over the Central, East Tennessee, Georgia Midland and Angusta railroads avoiding the already crowded Broad street bridge, and an ontert for fire brigade. Both the initial and terminal points are plenty high enough for all trains to pass under. There is also space for pillars of stone, that will not in the least interfere with them. I look upon the building of this bridge as one of public necessity. All the hauling destined for the Central can get to its depot via Thompson, that for the East Tennessee, Georgia Midhand, Florida, etc., via Forsyth and Peters, and for the Augusta via Alabama.

The above suggestions have been laid before the city council, and have been referred to the street committee, and I have merely called your attention to the matter that you may, without much trouble, visit the points laid down, and you can then form an idea of its practicability, as well as its great advantage, and urge its erection. Respectfully, what Dr. Hodgson suggests:

ham, Ala. R. K. Paul and J. M. Stamps, two of the jurors dissented from the verdict and sent in a minority verdiet that the authorities were blameable in al-lowing him to remain in the yard after he was found to be intoxicated. It was clearly proven that he was more or less under the influence of liquor during the morning, but a number of witnesses testified that he was sober and able to attend to his business without danger to himself or others during the afternoon.

The Cloak season with us has been immense Despite the mild winter we have sold double the amount of Cloaks ever sold by us in any one fall before. The season to date has been a profitable one, therefore we can afford to sacrifice stock now on hand.

When we say sacrifice, we don't mean any half-way business. We go the whole length, and place every garment in stock at from one-half to one-fourth of actual value. Newmarkets, Connemaras, Modjeskas and Jackets to be made short work of. Original price or value not considered. The loss is ours, and we accept it as best we can. Turn it to your profit by paying the department a call the coming week. The prices at
